

Chandler Home on Michaux

Residence of W. W. Chandler, situated on Michaux Road, Riverside.
W. L. B. Jenney, Architect.

The building was designed for a comfortable and convenient, though comparatively inexpensive cottage. The hall is upon the north side, and communicates with parlor on the south, with sliding doors separating it from the sitting room, with bay window on the south, and a bed-room, with wardrobe closet, on the north. To the rear of these rooms are the dining room, kitchen and pantries. There are four medium sized chambers, all supplied with closets, commodious bath room, and an attic. In the basement are the laundry and cellars. There is a broad veranda and bay window in front; a side veranda and bay window on the south. The kitchen door is protected by a broad projecting hood, and there are similar, but more ornamental, bracketed hoods over the several windows of the lower story.

“The omission last week of mention of the house built by Mr. Chandler in the infancy of our community was a serious blunder. Mr. Chandler and family featured in our early society and although they went away in a few years, they left many friends. The home was bought from them by a family named Long of whom we shall speak again. When they left Mr. Havemeyer bought the property and one day we had the unique experience of seeing it walked away to the corner where the First Church of Christ Scientist is being built. It was destroyed by fire some years ago.”

ANOTHER HOUSE BURNED

It is with regret we note an added trial to the many problems met so manfully by our friend and neighbor, Geo. Smith in the lose of his house by fire early on Friday morning. Some time after two o'clock Mr. Smith was awakened by a choking smoke and realized that there was a fire somewhere. Hastily arousing his two young daughters he got them to safety and called for help.

The town whistle alled some from their beds and Fred Babson was not long in getting his auto after the fire department and feaking up the street roused others to a realizing sense of fire. Of course Tip Collis got there and with Mr. Babson had work under way when the crowd arrived, but there was so little any one could do as the fire was in the walls and as soon as flames burst out the fire was everywhere. The fire laddies also got many a good word from those who watched their efforts.
